

GATHERING ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

Activity overview: In this activity, identify various ways to help families share perspectives on their child's learning.

Directions: It is important to use multiple sources of information to inform teaching. One way to gain insights about children is by asking families at parent-teacher conferences to share information about their child's development and learning at home and in the community. Select a domain of development and learning to gather information:

Identify three different ways to elicit information from families about their child.

A way to learn about a child's experiences or interests:

A way to find out about the child's abilities in the learning domain you've selected:

A way to seek information about the child's needs in that domain:
